InterContinental London Park Lane seeks the world's best food photos

InterContinental London Park Lane, the embodiment of modern luxury in the heart of Mayfair, is sponsoring an exciting new category, Food at the Table, for the world's leading awards for food photography and film, Pink Lady® Food Photographer of the Year 2017.

The category, created specially for the hotel, seeks the very best and most delicious images of food photographed in hotels, restaurants, and bars anywhere in the world.

"We are delighted to partner with these prestigious awards," says Alvaro Rey, General Manager of InterContinental London Park Lane. Our culinary offering is a huge focus for us and we are proud to house Theo Randall at the InterContinental, which just celebrated its 10th year as one of London's most loved Italian restaurants. In early 2017 we welcome the revered Martha Ortiz, who will open her first location outside of Mexico. Martha's arrival brings two renowned Chefs under one roof.'

"This is a perfect partnership," says Caroline Kenyon, Director of the Awards. "InterContinental London Park Lane completely embraces quality and style, with a love of superb food. We are really looking forward to seeing the images submitted as well as welcoming Theo Randall on to the Judging Panel. "

Pink Lady® Food Photographer of the Year, now in its sixth year, has garnered 30,000 images and films since its inception in 2011. This year, the judges, chaired by Jay Rayner, include David Loftus, photographer to Jamie Oliver, Emily Luchetti, Chair, James Beard Foundation, NYC and Wajmah Yaqubi, Global Photo Director, BuzzFeed. The winning images will be shown in the world-renowned Mall Galleries, London next April.
